SENIORS

Four years.
It seemed like it would never end. Like the endless string of classes and homework and term papers and special projects would just keep rolling until Armageddon.
But everyone once in a while, after taking a step back from the daily grind, it seemed time passed so quickly it would run out in the time it takes to take a breath of air. Worrying about next year's school or job. Cocerns over meeting Judson's rising tuition costs paled in comparision with the cost of living on your own. Homecoming, soccer season, the basketball, spring banquet, and graduation swept by.
Everything that seemed so very important or tedious or time-consuming was here . . . and then gone.
There were a lot of good times, a lot of good people.
Memories never die, and leaving Judson doesn't mean abandoning everyone associated with Judson. The friends made here will be friends for life.
But the time seemed like it would never end. And it ended so fast.
Four years.

UNDERCLASSMEN

The underclassmen are definitely a diverse group. The freshman can be seen frantically scurrying through the campus, clutching books to their chests in an effort to remain intact between classes. The sophomores, of course, are "old pros", at least until someone reminds them that the words sophomore are sophomoric are probably directly related. The juniors guide by until they smugly usurp control from the hands of departing seniors.

While this description may have some small truth, it is not the complete picture. True freshmen tend to be a little green, but they quickly become acclimatized to Judson's atmosphere and begin to take part in Judson outside of the classroom. The sophomores may seem overbearing at times but it is a sign that they've become a part of the Judson community. The juniors are often the best-liked of all the classes, mainly because they are vicarious participators in Judson society, and are not yet concerned with "life after Judson". It is the underclassmen who make up the bulk of Judson, and they always rise to the occasion of being Judson's mainstays.

REFUGE

God is our Refuge and Strength; and ever present help in trouble. Therefore, we will not fear. Though the Earth give way and the mountains fall into the heart of the sea. Though it's waters roar and foam and the mountains quake with their surging. Psalm 46:1-3

Fun Week

1. Freshmen Margaret Seaver, Jenny Heikes, Pam Beaty, and Dwight Kirkland sit around at the Big Sib/Little Sib Picnic. 2. Michelle, Cynthia, and Susan enjoy some first year comraderie during Fun Week. 3. Todd and Glenn raise a Shasta to a successful first week at Judson.

Suddenly, there we were — Judson College freshmen. No longer did we enjoy the prestige and frivolity of being high school seniors. Instead, we'd been deserted, marooned on a campus expected to . . . wear beanies?

Most of us, despite pangs of homesickness, believed we wer going on to bigger and better things. We'd been brainwashed. Could anyone have known the evils that were to befall us? The upperclassmen did. They must have spent all summer devising their insidious plots to "break us in" to college life. For starters, we were forced to stand in line for three hours to become "official college students". However, we came out of registration feeling like kindergarten students, bewildered by hundreds of forms, and humiliated by mandatory blue-and-white beanies. Of our own free will, we'd been demoted. The upperclassmen knew it. And loved it.

Naturally, everyone of them was eager to take under their wings a poor, defenseless "foster child." Which meant us. But those darn beanies! Despite all efforts, we could see no good in them. To make it worse, the upperclassmen were everywhere, making sure that we never lost our prized college possessions. And where beanies go, embarrassment follows. After all, they represented our lowly status, of which we were none too pleased. We only wore them to avoid the final degradation, which occurred that Sunday. We were invited, nay coerced, to attend a special meeting of the school judiciary assembly, temporarily renamed Kangaroo Court. Here a few special people were recognized and justly rewarded for their outstanding contributions to the preceding week's activities. Eventually, we realized it wasn't just us against them, "them" being the big, bad underclassmen. After all, "them" had endured this same ritual in years past. Unknown to us, the objects and rituals we so adamantly despised served a dual purpose. Through common experiences grew a common bond. We had survived the Judson Inquisition, and together as a class.

Suddenly, we were truly Judson Students!

1. Keith Pederson shows his legs on Dress-up Day. 2. Noelle Perry poses for the camera in her pj's on Dress-up Day. 3. Sandy Schulenberg goes on Safari on Dress-up Day.

1. J-Squad member Jerry Gilsdorf makes sure Freshmen Dirk Wellington keeps his Izod on straight at Kangaroo Court. 2. Bonnie Best starting attempt at "The Big Burp" with J-Squad escorts Jerry Gilsdorf and G.J. Carter. 3. Freshmen Bill Wilson kisses a hidden Brad Morissey? 4. J-Squad members cajole April Frost into blowing the biggest bubble-gum bubble she can.

Homecoming

Suddenly, there we were decked out . . . dressed to the nines . . . in our Sunday best. What Geason on Earth could have compelled us all to get so spitted up with no place to go but the gym? Even some of the alumni had returned on this special weekend to relive old memories and examine the Judson they had left behind years ago. The soccer players were heroes for the day as various couples, arm in arm, made their way toward an awaiting candlelight banquet and program. Sunday best? Alumni? Soccer? Banquet? it could only mean one thing-Homecoming, Judson College, 1985.

Saturday started much as any other. The days activities were set in motion at a routine, yet oddly different, soccer game. More fans than ever before turned out to cheer on the Eagles as they battled.

We still wanted to celebrate the team's efforts throughout the year and what better way than to party, er, banquet? For weeks before, guys had spent hours pacing and wondering whether or not girls would turn down their invitations to the banquet. At the same time, girls had been testing hairstyles and trying out dresses while anxiously awaiting "that special guy" to ask them.

Once we were all spitted up and ready to go we were great. The atmosphere was quite formal and yet comfortably laidback. Nets spanning the ceiling contained hundreds of autumn colored balloons, and candy corn on the tables completed the harvest atmosphere.

During the program, the homecoming court was announced and, of course, special attention was paid to the 1985 Homecoming king and queen: Bill Edwards and Charlotte Robinson.

As the program drew to a close, love-striken couples and other groups of friends made their way out to continue a night of fun. Homecoming 1985 made a lasting impression on the minds of many new students and alumni alike.

1. The 1985 Homecoming Court poses for the Lantern they are: Ric Hazle, Tom VanderWell, kirk Anderson, King Bill Edwards, Queen Charlotte Robinson, Jody VanderWell, Hope Wilson, and Bonnie Best. 2. Homecoming King Bill Edwards and Queen Charlotte Robinson.

Founder's Day

Suddenly, it was Founder's Day. "Founder's Day?" you ask. "What's so special about Founder's Day?" True, many will remember little more than a longer than usual chapel, five rows of Judson dignitaries, and all the Judson professors wearing graduation robes.

Yet, in an odd way, it was a solemn time. After all, the entire day was set up to remember and pay tribute to Benjamin Browne, the college's original founder, and all of the other men and women that really laid the foundation for Judson College. Without each of them, there would be no Judson to attend.

The end of Founder's Day ushered in another landmark on the college calendar-Parents' Weekend. And the parents came. In hordes. They came to scope out the campus where their "poor little babies" had been spending so much time away from home. Of course, to make things more interesting and acceptable for the Folks, we had to spruce up college life a little. The major occurence of the weekend was the Judson College student body talent show. Parents and students were pleasantly surprised to discover the hidden abilities and lack thereof that were sprinkled among the student body. As all good things do, parents' weekend came to a close. The parents began drifting off one by one, Judson life slowly returned to normal, and we would once find parking places in the Ohio/Wilson parking lot.

O Judson, Now We Hail Thee

O Judson, now we hail thee, thou school we hold so dear.
Our thoughts and hearts are with thee though we be far or near.
We pledge our full devotion, our loyalty is sure.
With Christ our valiant leader, Judson shall endure.

Our days upon the campus are swiftly left behind;
But we shall always keep thee within our heart and mind.
We gather now to greet thee, time calls us far from here.
But we shall ever love thee, Alma Mater dear.

The call of Christ is sounding far over land and sea;
And youth must answer bravely whatever the need may be.
Our highest and our noblest, our Savior God, to Thee
We dedicate with Judson for eternity.

1. Sisters, Joy and Cindy Wilkerson really do like each other. 2. Cheryl Hartman and Pam Maas enjoy a windy day. 3. "I want to be in the yearbook, please?"

It's art because I say it is!

No craftsman completes a piece of work alone. He depends on so many others for guidance, assistance, inspiration, and support. So it is with the yearbook. We are indebted to everyone who has been a part of our craftsmanship: Scott Burley, James Dawson, Nancy Dawson, Randy Dunn, Barbara Evans, Lori Flegel, Timothy Gilbert, Matthew Granger, Beth Hughes, David Judy, Stephanie Keeler, Brian Kohler, Steven Layne, Natalie Lindstrom, Engrid Lowe, Christa McDonald, Jill Northey, Cheryl Potts, David Salstrom, Carrie Sartain, Jennifer Sparks, Monette Stanaford, Brian Swanson, Keith Thompson.
